Publisher’s Note

Peer Review for Endeavour

Since its founding in 1942, Endeavour has delivered concise and highly-accessible articles on the history and philosophy of science to its readers. We are pleased to announce that from 2010, under the editorship of Dr. John Waller (Michigan State University), Endeavour will move to the peer-review system. We believe that this development, according the research published in the journal the definitive stamp of academic quality, will serve to further highlight and underline the calibre of scholarship in its pages. Furthermore, the journal will now be soliciting submissions from all over the world via its online submission and review system (http://ees.elsevier.com/endeavour/). Each submission will be read, sent out for review and the Editor will make a final decision regarding acceptance, revision or rejection. Acceptance will depend on meeting the journal’s ever-high standards for academic excellence, but also Endeavour’s ongoing commitment to ‘readability’.

This development firmly secures Endeavour’s place among its fellow journals and we look forward to a further diversification of authorship and some new perspectives on history and philosophy of science, whilst retaining the same clear and accessible style which has been the hallmark of the journal. At the same time, Endeavour is pleased to offer many exciting new publishing possibilities to its authors. Did you know, for example, that the journal accepts supplementary multimedia data to enhance your paper such as video, audio and graphical files? These will be published alongside your article on ScienceDirect (www.sciencedirect.com) and can serve to make your submission stand out above the crowd. For full details of how to submit, visit Endeavour’s website where you can also access a free copy and view details of the journal’s Board, Impact Factor and subscription prices: www.elsevier.com/locate/endeavour.

We look forward to receiving your submission in 2010 and beyond and we would like to take this opportunity to thank all those involved with Endeavour’s editing, production and, of course, all its authors and reviewers. Best wishes for the New Year!

Christopher M. Tancock
Publisher, Elsevier Ltd.
c.tancock@elsevier.com